Talent Manager to Search for Recruitment Stars

A well-respected specialist recruitment consultancy has demonstrated its commitment to its people with the appointment of a brand new role – Talent Manager.

Maxine De Lacy-Jones comes to R³ Resourcing with significant training and development experience, having previously held roles in the industry as a Recruitment and Development Manager, and Training and Development Director. Her position with R³ forms part of the company's commitment to developing their team and bringing only the brightest and best talent into the business.

"I'm hugely excited about my new role" Maxine explained, "and can't wait to get started. Whilst R³ doesn't face the same high attrition rates as most companies, and has a fantastic level of morale and staff motivation, my job will be to maintain these and if possible build them even further. I have worked with some great people in the past so know what success looks like. I'll be seeking opportunities to bring some of these powerhouses into R³, as well as searching for fresh talent and actively encouraging ongoing development and progression for the team that are here."

R³ already has a reputation for being one of the best recruitment consultancies to work for, and offers a range of innovative perks to staff including duvet days, high-flyer £5,000 holidays, free fresh fruit platters and at-desk massages – they'll even pay for football season tickets.

"Bringing Maxine on board is an important step in the growth of our business" explained R³ Managing Director Alison Tawn. "We have always been committed to our people as our benefits package shows, but Max can help us formalise that and through her industry experience can help us ensure that we're one of the premier choices for good recruitment consultants looking for their next move" she concluded.

R³ is an innovative recruitment consultancy which services the retail, leisure and sales sectors under its specialist divisions R³ Retail and R³ Sales. Experienced teams look after a portfolio of clients, which includes a variety of industry and sector leaders, from offices in Birmingham, Manchester and London.
